Unit 5 – Website Design Document

My website will be twofold; the first is a step-by-step course walkthrough, with each assignment and unit posted. It will also have information and media about Golf. The description of the functions and skills learned within the course is as follows:

Text: The mockup outlines the index and landing page, including the text and information about this course. Each assignment will be posted within the correct section. Sections are within their blocks, with a link to each document or page developed during the course.

Pictures: In Unit 2, I demonstrated my ability to implement images by posting three photos of the most influential people in my life in a collage format.

Multimedia: This will have videos about golfing and tips on improving your game and swing by my favorite YouTube swing coach. Rick Shiels is a professional golfer and PGA tour player with an excellent guide on developing a swing for anyone, from the most basic beginners to the most advanced and professional-level players.

Links: Links are provided throughout the Index Page. I provide PDF versions of each document created throughout the course and links to every version of Form Creation homework. Each link opens on a new page to facilitate more straightforward navigation on the index page as one progresses through the course.

User Design: The layout mockup is provided in the Unit 3 Section, with the original design document and PDF version of the site mockup with a color pallet included.

I ordinarily wanted to implement each of the screenshots taken during the course to show the growth of the index page and CSS implementation and refinement throughout the course. Still, in the end, I felt it added too many links and distractions without adding any value.
